Arranged into two groups: an original accession, boxes 1-695 and an increment of additional materials, boxes 696-899. Within the two groups materials are arranged in series by physical form or topic.

Boxes 1-191	PRINTED MATERIAL, 1911-1977 Scope and Content Note Arranged alphabetically by title or author
Boxes 192-194	BIOGRAPHICAL FILE, 1922-1974 Scope and Content Note Material on or about Jay Lovestone, arranged alphabetically by title or subject

During this time the party underwent a number of name changes. In September 1919, two parties were founded, the Communist Party of America (CPA) and the Communist Labor Party (CLP). Forced to go underground in 1920, the two groups split further. In May 1920, a United Communist Party began, and another Communist Party of America was organized in May 1921. The latter split into two parties with the same name in January 1922. In December 1921, the Workers Party of America (WPA) was formed, and in February 1922, the United Toilers of America. In April 1923, a united, legal group became the Workers Party of America. Two further name changes followed in the 1920's: in 1925, the name was changed to the Workers (Communist) Party of America, and in 1929, the Communist Party of the United States (CPUSA). Material in this file is from several of the aforementioned groups. In order to keep the organization as straightforward as possible, however, the papers have been arranged under the generic title of the Communist Party, U.S.A. Arranged alphabetically and chronologically.* [*At various times when Jay Lovestone was in the Communist Party and the Communist Party Opposition, he used the following pseudonyms: Bacon, Beets, Birch, Gaynor (Traynor?), William B. Judd, Langley, Edmund J. Lawson, Roger B. Nelson, Powers, John Robertson, George Robin, George J. Thornton, Wheat].
Boxes 230-233	COMMUNIST PARTY (OPPOSITION), 1929-1940 Scope and Content Note Correspondence, financial documents, meeting notes, reports, etc., related to the political group founded by Jay Lovestone after he was expelled from the Communist Party by Iosip Stalin in 1929. Initially, the group was called the Communist Party of the U.S. (Majority Group). The name was changed in 1932 to the Communist Party (Opposition). In 1937, it became the Independent Communist Labor League and in 1938, the Independent Labor League of America. In addition to the official names given to the group, it was also variously known as the Lovestone Group or the Lovestoneites. In this series, it is called the Communist Party, U.S.A. (Opposition) and material from the various groups is found herein. Arranged alphabetically and chronologically.* [*At various times when Jay Lovestone was in the Communist Party and the Communist Party Opposition, he used the following pseudonyms: Bacon, Beets, Birch, Gaynor (Traynor?), William B. Scope and Content Note

The Hoover Institution Archives acquired the main body of its Jay Lovestone Papers in 1975. However smaller additions to the collection continued to be received throughout Lovestone's life and, via his estate, after his death in 1990. The Register to the Jay Lovestone Papers was completed in 1980 and covers all material received up to that time--Boxes 1-695 plus considerable audiovisual material. That Register remains the principal overall description of the Lovestone Papers and should first be consulted by the researcher. This Addendum covers the materials in Boxes 696-899, received after completion of the Register. As might be expected these materials date disproportionately from the later years of Lovestone's life, but they include much earlier material as well. Most of the pre-1980 material represented in the Addendum is certainly unique within the collection. However, because of multiple copies of some items or presence of both originals and photocopies of others, there are undoubtedly some instances of duplication between material in the main part of the Papers and that covered by the Addendum. It was not practicable to search systematically for possible duplication of each item in the Addendum materials, and no attempt was made to do so. The researcher is alerted accordingly.

Note

Note: Other pseudonyms that may appear in this collection include "E. F." and "Ed Five" and "Ed Fisher," all of which are believed to be pseudonyms of Leonid Belsky, and "Y. F.," believed to be a pseudonym of I. E. Ferguson. The pseudonym "Comrade F." appears to depend on context, and may mean either Ferguson or Fraina.
